This act came in 2005 which also gave the definition of women and domestic violence.

- In this act any women - wife, daughter, sister, girlfriend, live in relation can complain on domestic violence which can be physical or psychological.
- ~~It~~ has given a right to women which is often seen in a patr
- It provides the completion of case in 60 days as well as orders such as protection, compensatory, monetary order and so on.
- It provides gender justice, protection to women, social security to woman.

→ Downsides :

- 1) It's not gender neutral
- 2) Often the cases are fake.
- 3) It requires the male to prove that he is innocent
- 4) It may lead to gender conflict and bloodshed.

Indian society has been patriarchal and it requires to empower women in India.

This act provides protection to women
as more cases go unnoticed in our society.
Though, ^{some of} the provisions of the Act has to be revised to make it gender neutral.

Equal reservation should be looked into and a provision for the same should be adopted.

India is a growing nation, with empowered women, it will lead to a India being a global power will ~~at~~ all the citizens contributing. Hence protecting them is required but it can be more gender neutral.
