

UPSC Q.C.A

Q. Now the qualities of neutrality & non-partisan contribute to the success of a civil servant?

Ans. Civil servants are supposed to have certain qualities that distinguish them from others and contribute in their success. Neutrality and non-partisanship are the two of them.

Being neutral to the different mindsets, social status, economic status, religion & races and gender, helps civil servant for better understandings and decision making and also the work quality, which all together lead to the success.

A civil servant is committed for public welfare and so the decisions taken by him has a large impact on the public life and their interest. Being neutral to the different aspects helps civil servant for situation handling and understanding and make him able to precisely work on those situations.

Non-partisanship is another quality that should be owned by a civil servant for better decisions.

UNIQUE IAS STUDY CIRCLE

UPSC Q.C.A

Different ruling parties come under power with different ideologies and work patterns. Some may support capitalism while some may support communism. Being neutral to the political parties and their ideologies helps civil servant to make decisions as per the requirement of any situation which is always better than the decisions made up on assumptions of any situation or political psychology towards the same.

14.5 CM

9) all together neutrality and non-partisanship makes a civil servant impartial and hence the decisions made by them will be ~~precise~~ precise and will lead them for all the success.

- LOKESH PATEL

Excell!