

Ans 13 → (1) Re-establishing high human values in Indian society

- Providing sex education right from the high school level on compulsory basis.
- Broad casting advertisements related to respecting woman through different means of communication like T.V., radio, social media.
- Conducting road shows, nukkad natak's etc to spread the awareness of women and her safety.

(2) Creating deterrence of law

- Speeding up the procedures of law to get the result as early as possible
- Ensure the practicality of the existing laws.
- Keep a strict watch on the officials entrusted in handling these cases; so that they may do their actions wisely and honestly.

(3)

Bringing changes in domestic law

- Any act which is done ~~which~~ affects the physical as well as mental state of the women is to be considered.
- Violence against women even in their homes should be made punishable.
- Law related to 'Marital rape' to be framed.
- Strict legislations related to human safety especially woman at their work place, safety at different public places to be taken into count.

Established since: 1990

(4)

Ensuring safety of women especially during night

- Installation of CCTV cameras at different places of the cities / towns with increased women violence.
- Keep a check in the suspected areas through patrolling of police.
- Generating help line numbers and circulating it;

for the women to use it in case of any emergencies.

5. Inculcating a feeling among women that the country is with them and they are safe

→ while questioning any women who has faced such violence, the investigators should do it in a way by safeguarding her self-respect.

→ The investigation in these cases should move appropriately and within certain time period.

→ Strict punishment of the criminals who were found guilty.

→ Confidentiality of the matters to be maintained if the survivors want so.

→ Strict laws to be implemented for safety of women in the country.

Excellant!