Why Madhya Pradesh is "BIMARU"?

250.

Ans-

The term "BIMARU" indicates the various states of India, which have very low socio-economic graph, low literacy rate with slow pace of development.

"BIMARU" stands for: Bi → Bihar, Ma → Madhya Pradesh, R → Rajasthan and U → Uttar Pradesh.

All the states which are grouped under the BIMARU tag are quite under developed as compared to the other states of India.

The states have much population too, which stabilizes the rate of development.

Thus, increasing the number of unemployed youths and lack of education. The high no. of population is itself a challenge to the state government. Since, the states like

Bihar, Uttar Pradesh and Rajasthan are adjoining to the Madhya Pradesh, it also has some influence over Madhya Pradesh.

The economy of the Madhya Pradesh is agrarian type i.e based on agriculture. Thus, literacy rate is low and further the high percentage of tribal population lead the Madhya Pradesh nowhere. And because of such major problems Bhopal district of Madhya Pradesh has the lowest literacy rate in all over the country. In spite of having such a depressed development rate, the Madhya Pradesh has proved itself above the top standards by achieving various awards like the Krishi Karmman Award for consecutive five years in a row. The award was given to Madhya Pradesh in the different fields related to the agriculture. Further the Indore district of Madhya Pradesh has been given the title of cleanest city in the country for continuous two times.

These awards made the Madhya Pradesh as a proud state among the others. Moreover, many world level productions houses and factories are being set up in the regions of Madhya Pradesh to fasten up the development of the state and its people. To further add up the charm, the honourable Chief Minister of M.P. called for an Investors Summit at Indore to attract domestic and foreign investment for the development of the State. All these initiatives have made the Madhya Pradesh to overcome the BIRYAKU Established since 1990 and increased its development rate effectively.
